World House Program
Rondine Cittadella della Pace, Italy
2027 - Call for participants
Deadline: January 17, 2027

Rondine Cittadella della Pace

Rondine Cittadella della Pace is a no-profit organization committed to reducing armed conflicts worldwide. With the goal of contributing to a world free from wars, Rondine disseminates its own methodology for creatively transforming conflicts in various contexts. This translates into the concrete objective of equipping individuals with the necessary tools to manage conflicts effectively.

The "Cittadella della Pace" (Citadel of Peace) is situated in Rondine, a medieval village in Tuscany, located a few kilometres away from Arezzo, Italy. It is within Rondine that the primary educational projects are developed, providing a dual opportunity to participants: the regeneration of the inner selves and the enhancement of leadership skills. These skills are intended to benefit both the individuals themselves and their communities, working towards the greater good.

The mission of Rondine Cittadella della Pace:

Rondine is committed to living, developing, and disseminating—starting from its hamlet—an innovative method for the creative transformation of conflicts: the Rondine Method, which focuses on relationship and trust.

Through daily life experiences, education, training, and research, Rondine prepares new generations of leaders capable of promoting dialogue, peaceful coexistence, and international cooperation, thereby helping to reduce armed and social conflicts and generating a positive impact on global society.

Thanks to over twenty-five years of experience, Rondine represents an international point of reference on multiple fronts:

CONFLICT TRANSFORMATION – Analysis of conflict contexts, both local and international, and identification of strategies to manage needs and challenges through the enhancement of common goods.

TRAINING – Dissemination of an innovative educational methodology for managing and transforming conflicts, capable of generating positive redemption.

PROJECT DESIGNING – Ideation, development, and implementation of project ideas with concrete positive impacts in their respective contexts.

PARTNERING – Creation of innovative partnerships with institutional and for-profit entities, including international ones.

Rondine bases its educational programs and activities on the method for creative conflict transformation, the Rondine Method - the relational approach to conflict, encompassing the practices derived from two decades of psycho-pedagogical research, academically validated[1]. It is structured around the discovery of the "enemy" as a deception that hinders communication and reciprocal compassion. The Method proposes a model of interpersonal relationships applicable to all contexts, where the word "enemy" has a symbolic connotation, and conflict is not seen as necessarily negative, but as a generative opportunity. To put this vision into practice, Rondine finalizes training to create professionally prepared and humanly motivated youth to enact positive changes in their own communities.

Over the years, the association has entered into agreements and conventions with numerous Italian institutions, and collaborates with Italian and international universities. Rondine has been granted special consultative status with the United Nations Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) since 2021 and has been admitted as partner with consultative status with United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) since 2025.

The World House

The vision of Rondine revolves around the World House, which has been welcoming young adults from war-torn countries or post-conflict situations since 1997. They are guided on a transformative educational journey that involves recognizing the humanity in their enemy through the establishment of entirely new relationships with members from the opposing side, in a broader intercultural and interreligious environment. It is a challenging and surprising educational experience: a structured daily cohabitation within a comprehensive program that includes training (academic and non-formal), and civic engagement activities.

Through the academic and the experience-based journey that includes lessons, workshops, events, volunteering activities, and community engagement, the program seeks to:

1) Engage in the creative conflict transformation following the Rondine Method;
2) Educate young individuals prepared to engage in constructive dialogue with the youth from the other side of the conflict and youth from other cultures, and share experiences;
3) Promote the development of projects and initiatives having a positive impact within fellows' communities;
4) Empower young peace leaders, encouraging them to contribute meaningfully to positive change and societal development.

In addition, fellows benefit from the many informal, social and cultural activities that Rondine offers with volunteers and participants to other programs run by the association.

The World House is an 18-month fellowship program – starting with a 3-month inception phase online and 15 months on campus, in Italy. Later, Rondine will select committed students for an additional 6-month training aimed at project development and local impact (under specific conditions, see "The Social Impact Semester" section).

The fellowship components

During the program, fellows engage in the following areas:

1. Daily life: as an experience-based fellowship, daily cohabitation and interaction are at the core of the program, offering a unique perspective and approach towards conflict transformation. Engage daily in the experience of cohabitation within the community group - comprised of both the international members of the World House and the staff - is essential to fully grasp the goal of the program, and to understand social, cultural and religious diversity. Commitment in this area includes caring for people and relationships and, at the same time, responsibility towards the spaces entrusted to the participants (houses, common areas), plus preserving the environment.

2. Capacity building training: Rondine offers to the World House fellows several training courses that constitute a structured educational path articulated into different modules. The training programs explore intertwined topics, linked by the common thread of creative transformation of conflict in relationships. It is also important to be willing to share personal memories, stories and feelings, as these are entrusted to others as acts of testimony and to gain a deeper understanding of one's internal conflict, the starting point to address broader conflicts – up to international, armed ones - according to the Rondine Method. International and local lecturers, trainers, scholars, and the staff conduct the training, covering the following modules:
    - Conflict: Exploring different dimensions of conflicts (intrapersonal, interpersonal, up to international), conflict analysis, narrative of the conflict, peacebuilding, international humanitarian law;
    - Interiority: Developing the ability to listen to one's own inner voice, and recognize how to manage and express emotions effectively (emotional intelligence, self-expression, personal and group dimension, and inner conflicts);
    - Impact: Project design (enhancing the ability to evaluate one's own personal context and territorial reference, understanding the essential components and stages of a project), environmental awareness and sustainability, communication and leadership skills.
3. Civic engagement: Fellows will actively participate in many programs, initiatives, and activities organized by Rondine that aims at fulfil the mission of the association, raise awareness, and promote active and global citizenship. This component is interconnected with the capacity-building component with special focus of the interiority and leadership skills. Furthermore, fellow will have the chance to attend multiple events, activities, media opportunities, educational meetings with schools and civil society organizations in Italy, as well as volunteering opportunity.

4. Academic degree: participants will have the chance to continue their academic journey and obtain a degree, so strengthening their professional skills and gaining additional knowledge to foster social change and make a positive impact. Fellows attend a one-year First Level Specializing Master (M1 - Master di Primo Livello, 60 ECTS)[2].

[2] Please find further information on the Italian academic system at: https://uni-italia.it/en/students/the-university-system/

Applicants are invited to choose a master among those in the attached list. They may indicate up to two options in the application form. The final selection will be confirmed at the end of the selection process, in agreement with the educational staff.
Rondine welcomes participants from all academic backgrounds since we strongly believe in the impact civil society and all professionals can have on conflict transformation.[3]

Program timeline

- 1st semester (July – December 2027): the World House program begins online (inception phase) and continues on campus for the first semester (trail period). More specifically:
  - Inception phase: the online period starts on July, 5. This phase aims at: consolidating basic levels of Italian language (through an online course); group building; introducing Rondine activities and people. At the same time, participants apply for visa and other required documents, supported by the Rondine International Relations Office.
  - Trial period: the residential part opens on September,27. Until December, participants are on a trial period to verify their motivation and commitment in the program. The staff evaluates Italian language proficiency, proactivity and cooperative attitude in the group: if positive, participants officially join the World House.
- 2nd semester (January – July 2028): Officially junior fellows, participants take part in lessons and activities primarily centered on the theme of conflict, plus the topics of the other training modules. Through the program, participants of the World House learn how to use these tools to experience directly the diversity in the group, which mirrors - on a smaller scale - the reality of the globalized world. Many of the lessons also provide content and several techniques to engage fruitfully in the Association educational and awareness activities. This period also marks the beginning of the fellows' Master programs at the University.
- 3rd semester (July – December 2028): The focus shifts towards leadership, strategic planning, and preparing to depart Rondine while starting the phase of identification of socially impactful projects that can be implemented after the end of the program. The program during this phase becomes more functional for practical implementation, fostering awareness of one's evolving identity, and clarifying one's professional calling. Moreover, as senior fellows, they are in charge of welcoming and mentoring the incoming junior generation during their trail period.

The Rondine staff evaluates the fellows' engagement in the program, especially when moving from a phase to another. Periodic individual meetings are aimed at assessing fellows' proactivity and their involvement in the above-mentioned areas. These meetings focus on evaluating their understanding and application of the Rondine Method, their presence and punctuality, proficiency in the Italian language, as well as motivation and engagement in Rondine' s activities. If fellows are not in line with the program requirements and commitment, Rondine reserves the right to discontinue their participation.

At the end of the program, fellows may join the organization founded by alumni in 2017, "Rondine International Peace Lab" (R-IPL), a network of over 200 professionals worldwide.

[3] Applicants interested in medical studies are not advised to apply due to the differences between regulations by the Italian Ministry of University and Research and other respective Ministries in their home countries.

The Social Impact Semester: from theory to local impact

As mentioned above, one of Rondine's primary objectives is to initiate processes of social change through globally and locally impactful projects, conceived and overseen by those who have completed the Association's training courses.

At the end of the program, some of the fellows are invited to stay in Rondine for an additional semester, the primary objective of which is the conception and design of local impact projects connected with Rondine goals, targets and areas.

During the Social Impact Semester, alumni will work specifically on their project ideas with technical lessons on project writing, stakeholder management, communication plans, budgeting and risk assessment. Rondine will offer specific mentoring and guidance for the advancement of this specific phase.

Alumni who access the Social Impact Semester will also represent Rondine at public events, in continuity with civic engagement work on behalf of the association and its values, and will be offered an internship at the Rondine offices.
